Craig, the clerk in the small drug store wasn't much of a salesman. He could never find the item the customer wanted. Joe, the owner, had enough of his clerk's incompetence and warned Craig that the next sale he missed would be his last.

Just then a man came in, coughing and asked Craig to find a remedy. Try as he might, Craig simply couldn't find the cough syrup. Remembering Joe's warning, he sold the man a box of laxatives and told him to take it all at once. The customer did as Craig said and left. Joe witnessed the whole transaction and confronted Craig “A laxative won't cure a cough, you fool!” Joe shouted. “Sure it will,” Craig said. “Give the guy a few minutes for the stuff to kick in and he'll be afraid to cough.

Y's CRACK

THE OFFICIAL BULLETIN OF
 Y's MEN's CLUB OF ANNA NAGAR

FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

Everybody discusses about the ensuing Y2K and the Millennium – While the Y2K is confined to computers, which has an indication for the year by its last two digits, the Computer may or may not decipher 00 as the year 1900 or 2000. Well and good, if 00 depicts 2000; but it may go haywire if 1900 is depicted. Because of this uncertainty, many an airlines may not be flying on 31.12.99 and 01.01.00. Instructions have been issued by many Indian and Multinational Corporate Institutions including NITED Nations advising their employees not to take any flights during the change over period from 1999 to 2000. Let us (who do not fly during the week end) watch the fun as to how the computer works during the change over. Even for the millennium, there is a controversy regarding the actual celebrations; whether the millenium starts on 1.1.2000 or 1.1.2001. The December issue of Y's crack will discuss in greater detail.
